It is when the known evidence points to the statement being true, and when the truth of the statement doesn't contradict other knowledge. The second is faith.

Philosophy vs. Faith | Torah Musings Jesse A: The reason philosophy cannot refute religion, according to Strauss, is that philosophy does not include any rational orientation to the world, and that religion is fundamentally non-rational. Philosophy is any solely rational orientation to the world, to the exclusion of non-rational elements such as revelation. What's the Relationship Between Faith and Philosophy? Philosophy is the study of, or the search for, knowledge and wisdom, while faith is unquestioning belief. Some might say by these two definitions that the two have nothing in common. On the other hand, there is little doubt that as people consider various philosophies and the claims of Christianity it seems both seek both knowledge and wisdom.
